(a) Up to and including 1958 average rainfall for each year (represented by 100) is the average over the period 1911–1942. As from 1st January, 1959 a long period average from a selection of representative stations is used.

SEASONAL CONDITIONS, TASMANIA: OCTOBER, 1962

Rainfall: Most settled areas received above normal rainfall for October. The falls were particularly welcome in the previously dry parts between Launceston and Mole Creek where good totals were received.

The only places to receive below normal falls were around Lewis Hill, Tooms Lake and Orford on the East Coast, portion of Cape Barren Island, the Dover-North Bruny Island area and parts of the West Coast.

The most favoured areas were in the band Yolla-Mole Creek-Tagarra and from Waterhouse Island to Deddington. These parts received mainly 50 to 100 per cent in excess of normal, totals reaching a peak of nearly two and a half times normal slightly north of Westbury.

Temperature: The whole of the State was generally colder than average during the month.

Mean maxima on the Plateau and in the Central North and Midlands were slightly over four degrees below normal. Other areas were mostly between two and four degrees below normal except for the North West where mean maxima ranged from about normal in the Burnie area to two degrees below in inland districts.

Frosts and Snow: A recession of frosts from coastal areas became apparent during October. By the end of the month only isolated frosts were being reported from the Plateau and the Upper Derwent area.

Widespread light to moderate falls of snow were reported from the Highlands, Plateau and Midlands on the 1st, 6th and 7th of the month.

Flooding: The only floods of any consequence occurred in the Mersey and North and South Esk systems on the 6th and 7th when light to moderate flooding was reported. That in the North Esk receded by the 11th but continued until the 13th in the other two rivers. No damage was reported.

Crops and Pasture: The cold month has meant a late season in most areas. Prospects remained good but the lack of warm Spring weather had a pronounced delaying effect on pasture and crop growth.
